

On Felines

LAMA SING ADDRESSES SOME PEOPLE'S DISDAIN FOR CATS:

LAMA SING: We would find that the presence of the felines in the abode are very positive force which should never be thought of as a detrimental force. We should also find that often those whom have been closest unto the light have been so, thus guided, protected, and kept in good companionship by one or another of that of the feline grouping.

We know that has been a question in past and we wish it to remain now, no longer necessary. We have a great regard for these creatures as it might by your present Earth time, quite clearly be known. See? We do not state that these are essential, but ever good companions. 19810713 P

QUESTION #19: One of the worst experiences in my life was one when I lost my long-haired calico cat while taking her to my new home. Is there any way you can tune in on what happened to her?

LAMA SING: It's basic. The consciousness of that feline was related to its previous donation to you, its previous gift to you in the environs or within the environs which you then resided in. It could not or did not wish to function in your destination's environs and simply chose to depart.

Learn this much from the felines: They are capable of giving tremendous quantities of love. They can protect, nurture, and guide. But when they know at a point that their presence may inhibit or limit, without a moment's hesitation they will turn around and depart. You've seen this as they train and love and care for their own offspring, haven't you? And when they know time is proper for them to go forward for other experiences, it's as though they have never known that creature. They simply turn about. See? And so it was for her to experience new consciousness, new environs. See?

QUESTION #22: You indicated that the life force of a cat was more independent than other forms and can choose its environs. Yet only one kitten in ten lives beyond one year, the others dying of starvation or other cruelty. And millions of cats are horribly tortured in vivisection or painful laboratory experiments. Why do cats have to suffer so much when, on the other hand, they were so honored in past, serving man and even yet a symbol of spiritual nature?

LAMA SING: Firstly, understand that they do not suffer. Remembering what was just given, they dwell ... that is, they perceive simultaneously several realms. If a consciousness involvement in your realm becomes distasteful, undesirable, or painful, they simply focus their consciousness on a different realm or sphere. It's not at all difficult for them to do. Their involvement in the Earth plane is largely to help, to be an adjunct to the works of mankind. And so the entry into the Earth plane in form — in physical form — is largely under the dominion of mankind as it is with all other kingdoms else than the souls themselves. 19790126 PF-Cats01-AnimKingdom

Understand that the feline is (in the comparative sense) one of the more advanced levels of the life forms in the animal kingdom and, as such, has transcended through limiting thoughts and attitudes which other life forms may still be dealing with. We do not wish to create a certain stigma or a certain pretense for the feline. But we do wish to respond with accurate information to the questions presented, and that is as accurate as we are capable of expressing in your terminology. ...

They are life forms uniquely evolved in the sense that they are functioning as a closely woven soul grouping or life force grouping. We can call the grouping more accurately by the term “soul grouping” in the sense that the entirety of the grouping called felines has a consciousness of its own nature and has a consciousness of God. ... Felines, are in communication at some level with a consciousness which is not limited to the physical. ...

In the transition of a feline from the physical body to the eternal body, we find this is a matter of great ease for them. Reason: They frequently do such things throughout their life experience in physical body. It is their nature to easily move from a physical, finite position within a physical structure unto other realms and unto other locations. Thusly, they guard their physical body even while it sleeps and are capable of guarding or protecting those of their chosen ones in a like manner.

Such movement you would call astral travel or projection. They simply return their life force unto the grouping ... wherein it is renewed, balanced, and wherein they draw whatever is needed from the eternal reservoir, an infinite supply of their needs. They may return into the physical body accompanied by other fragmentarial consciousnesses. Or they may actually (for a time) depart the physical body; and the body can function in a sense very similar to its normalcy. ...

In terms of their transition, the movement is along a passageway much like a tunnel, a corridor. It is shaftlike in its nature; and it is as though a ray of light is focused upon the physical body; and that ray of light, then (when the body is no longer needed or the work is completed) simply returns to its source, as though the being was very slowly withdrawn and reabsorbed into its source. This is done in order to allow the physical components of that body to disassemble. In the process, they are returned to the source from which they have been drawn in order to complete the cycle of regeneration for those whom shall follow. ...

So to answer your question: You will, indeed, see Meko again

Mend thy heart, child. This feline is yet with thee and will, throughout eternity, be as a brilliant adornment upon thy life form and, as such, an ever present companion and a living testimony to the capacity of love and kindness which thee bear in thy innermost chamber.

19840518 PF Felines