

Lama Sing Excerpt: January 2033 - About the Promise

SUSAN: Could you tell us in words what is the Promise that is being sought or is seeking to be born in this lifetime of light?

LAMA SING: Yes. That all these things and greater shall ye do; that thou art the Children of God; and as you See, Know, and Claim this, then the Promise as given by the Christ will be made manifest.

When such is manifest, then He shall come, just as those who saw Him leave.

What does this mean to the Earth, to the world in general? For some, it will mean little until those changes which are ahead cause them to awaken and ask. When the familiar is shaken, and they must reassess, realign, and change their thinking; when those who know at varying degrees of their past lifetimes of light claim these and use them to build upon; then that Promise will manifest. First, in them: who they are, what they do. And then the Way is passable, and He will enter.

But mind you, not only He but those who are One with Him; those who have given the same word and teaching in many diverse places, lands, and cultures. Each has, equally so, this opportunity. Whether they follow Mohammed, Buddha, Krishna, or one of the many, many other great lights and spiritual leaders of present and past times.

The Promise is embraced in your lifetimes of light. You have carried it forward, lifetime after lifetime, as either a flame within or a brilliantly glowing ember. In either case it is there, awaiting you to fan it into flame again. To fuel it with your faith, your trust, and all the other qualities as we have given and others like us, in past, present, and future works.