

Choice – free will and Free Will

I do not believe I chose to fall. I did choose to incarnate into an experience wherein falling is possible and affords one opportunities to grow and appreciate more in such experiences.

When one begins to remember that beyond the structure of finiteness where the Complete Spirit abides one isn't "growing" through facing and overcoming challenge and adversity but gloriously expanding in experiences as Creation unfolds, that one might look around incarnation and say "I choose to be Free to delight in the infinitesimal ways Creation presents Itself." Just as we have the right to choose to continue to experience the surprises of an incarnate life that includes the "good, the bad" and the sometimes very tough extremes, we have the right to choose, "Thank you, and I choose now to be Complete with that format of learning."

This doesn't mean you "die," or that you have to give up things or people you love. It would mean that your choices are no longer subject. What one does with their newly reclaimed utter Free Will, how one chooses to actualize Consciousness, will be up to them. And THIS is why it is paramount for anyone choosing this route that they understand it cannot be accomplished if one still has the tendency, the urge, the "temptation" to want to fix people or things. Remember all the times Yo-El wanted to go into the Earth-Place to help, and Father and the Shining One made sure Yo-El understood that he could offer, but it had to be in a way that would not interfere in any way with their creations and their choices. He left finiteness numerous times, and those with him, to reckon with this.

The "ending" of that historical retelling by the Elders was that the "time" would come when those in the All would go back to the No-Place, the Shining One leading, and open the way for all in all realms to see the Portal to True Freedom for those within those realms who had long forgotten. When He comes, it will be up, then, for each to choose either to move through the Portal or continue on in finiteness because overcoming and success does indeed feel so wondrous.

This group is a vanguard. We have been blessed beyond measure with knowing the true history and future of humankind recounted from the Love beyond that sees it all, far more than Earthly historians could ever imagine. Through immersing ourselves in that work we came to our history from outside this life and incarnations. And we are choosing, with all our heart and with all our might and against all the odds we had previously agreed to, to go out and meet the Light at the Portal. When we have done that, each will be Free to choose what comes next for them and how they will exercise, actualize, their newly reclaimed, Utterly Exquisite Uniqueness. And they will Know in an instant, by Earthly measure. In that instant, will they be or have been “gone?” Only so as they would choose.

Our utter focus on the Light will surely have beautiful effects on mass-mind, but that cannot be our focus. See? But meeting the Light at the Portal, moving now to meet the Shining One and all our Brethren ... Can you imagine the gift we will have given ourselves for all Eternity? And the blessing we shall have given to the Path and Its offering of Freedom for all?

Actualizing Consciousness Does Not Mean Death - Actualizing Consciousness means that the consciousness we have been accustomed to in this lifetime will be replaced by the full Consciousness we currently abide in as Spirit.

This does not mean “death” as someone inferred to me the other day. It would mean the greater LIFE, for one would be able to express and experience life Freely, True Free Will claimed WITHIN FINITENESS. Beyond the free will of an adept who delights in life and in being able to make the highest and best out of every situation, this is the Free Will of a master who delights in Freely choosing every experience and in BEing the FREED LIGHT of their Uniqueness wherever they are guided to be.

About the Lavender Mist – Though no longer lavender unless I bring that on for the sheer sweetness of doing so, the Mist is a literal mist around me now that I see through. I know it to be Father, but additionally it is as though He said to me, “As you see me with you now, watch. I will play with you.” And it is that, because I do and because I also expect Him, He is there to greet me in all the little choices. In my conscious intentional awareness, for instance, as I raise a glass of water to drink, or wake up my computer, or reach for the door knob... He greets me, like, “See? I told you.” And so, He is everywhere and it is such a peaceful joy. I see through Him to the choices I make, so it makes finiteness surreal and the infinite the reality. The added bonus is that I am dwelling within the Consciousness of those who walk with me unseen. No, I don’t “see” them. I just feel and know them all about in the sweet Mist. It isn’t that finiteness has no joy or is of less value. It’s that it has this new spin on it. Can you imagine? If you can, we can play in the Mist together and tell one another about the wonders.
