

Now Is That Time

Audio - Now Is That Time

Now is that time to know and to claim who you are, and to recognize you are not powerless if you would but claim your Oneness with your Father.

Find shelter in the love of one another.

Find strength in the willingness to give your heart to the common intent of your group.

Find strength in the claiming of a common ideal, a common intent.

And know that, when you step forward to be a part of that certain work, that you do so with the Father, for you are His.

These are those times to break the shackles, the chains that bind. Love yourselves, in order that you shall be able to know Father's Love for you and that, together, this Love can flow freely as a gentle breeze to wave across the lands to be taken into the Earth, itself, into the waters, the air, and all the creatures. See your past as that upon which you now stand and that, alone; dwell not long in the contemplation of it, lest it call you back to give it greater and greater energy. Be free.

When you consider your human expression, you are, in so many ways, considering all of humanity. And when you look across the lands that comprise the sum of Earth you can see the traditions, the belief structures, the habits, and the presence of those things which form the chains that limit. Do not believe for a moment that, because you are at a distance or that you are but one, that you have no power over helping those in distant lands who are entangled in the chains of habit or judgment or dogma or creed. For, it is what it is: the power of God that flows from within you, and you can touch them in a manner as you have been touched, and they can find the sacred Silence and the Peace and Love and the Grace of Father. And once it is known, it is ever known.

The tools with which you doeth the work is no different than ours, here. The only difference that might exist is your willingness to claim them.

When you gather together to let the Light of your Spirit and the combined Spirit of your group, you are using that power of Father within you all. The greater that you Know this, the more it can flow unencumbered ... not to do a thing, but to give His blessings, His strength, His compassionate understanding, and to make known between all involved – the receivers and the givers, alike – that you are brothers and sisters of the One God, and the pathway between you is His Love.

— 20121111 WD